

You can receive extra support while you study!

Do you find it difficult to concentrate, do you have problems reading or writing, or is there anything else that makes you hesitate about studying? If so, you could qualify for individual pedagogical support for education (IPSU).

IPSU can provide you with the support you need to succeed with your studies. Here are some examples of the help you can receive:

- We work together with you to identify what you need in order to succeed
- Computers, dictaphones, apps or anything else that could aid you in your studies
- Practice study techniques and strategies before you begin your course
- Pedagogical support during your studies
- We give your teachers training to help them provide you with the best conditions for success

Does this sound interesting?

If so, you should talk to your coordinator at Arbetsförmedlingen. Ask about IPSU.

"I wanted to train as a chef, but I had problems reading and writing. It was difficult for me to learn the theory.

I was able to borrow a laptop with a program that reads out the course literature.

I also received weekly support of a pedagogue from Iris.

Today, I work as a chef in a restaurant."

"I found it difficult to plan my studies.

I learned to make use of study aids. This helped me to plan and to remember what I had to do.

The teachers and my classmates also learned how they could give me support.

I have now completed my studies and am ready to start working."
